Sowing Seeds of Beans and Melons.

Special rates given on application.

Many of us when getting our education in vegetable gardening recollect how anxious we were to make an early start in the Spring, and how often we had to sow our seeds, not once but twice and three times over, from Itis said that in the Welsh language putting them in too early, the cold or dampness cutting them off for us. Most all of us now wait until all dan-If a man could only look at himself ger is assuredly past before we sow. with a sober eye when he is drunk, he But this waiting often throws us behind our more venturesome neighbors who have been willing to run a little
